

Public Policy, Equality and Diversity in the Context of Devolution

The Centre for Research in Education Inclusion and Diversity (CREID) at the University of Edinburgh would like to invite you to a seminar on Public Policy, Equality and Diversity in the Context of Devolution on Friday, 11th November 2005. This is the third in the ESRC funded seminar series and its focus is on mainstreaming equality and diversity in different institutional contexts and settings.

The seminar will take place from 9.30am until 3.00pm in Committee Room 1, Glamorgan Building at Cardiff University. A full programme is attached.

The first seminar took place in Belfast in February and focused on the challenge of mainstreaming in the context of tensions between different equality strands. The second seminar was in Edinburgh in June and concentrated on approaches to equalities in different parts of the UK and internationally. See our web-site (www.creid.ed.ac.uk) for papers and abstracts.

Please feel free to pass on the programme and invitation to anyone else who you think might be interested. We are able to pay travel expenses for PhD students.

We very much hope you will be able to join us for the seminar. An RSVP is attached – please e-mail your acceptance to Catherine Burns (catherine.burns@ed.ac.uk).

Yours sincerely

Professor Sheila Riddell
Director of CREID
